All About Golf

You play golf 25 or more times each year and if your friends were to describe you "golfer" would be a term that would come up. You have a reliable putter you can't throw out and we're guessing you own your fair share of golf hats too!

You know what you can do and instruction in this level works to get you there consistently and with that even lower scores as we teach you all the shots you could possibly encounter or need.

New Golfer

You are new on your golf journey or returning to the game after a long time off.

Golf is a great activity you can enjoy with friends and family. It also presents you with great opportunities for networking in business or physical activity for overall health. Instructional programs here are going to give you the fundamentals and knowledge to enjoy a round of golf while also teaching you all those "other" things that make you feel at home on the course.

Casual Golfer

Golfers in this group typically play 1-7 rounds of golf per year with friends, family and in the occasional company outing. You can play your own ball for a round of golf but are looking to improve so maybe you can shoot lower scores, hit more good shots than bad and just have more fun on the course.

Instruction here gets more detailed but with a still strong focus on fundamentals to build a reliable and repeatable swing. Fun stage as instruction here often leads to bigger leaps forward than other stages.

Frequent Golfer

Golf is a selected hobby for you here where you are typically playing 8-24 rounds each year. You love the game enough to even sneak out and play a little on your own and spend time working on your game on the practice facility. At this stage you are seeing your potential and know with a little help the ball will fly further, hit straighter and scores will start dropping.

Instruction here gets more detailed and specific to you in each area of your game. This is where you take that leap from 90s to 80s or even 80s to 70s!
